MICHAEL PHELAN has earned international acclaim as one of America's most knowledgeable Mind-Body-Spirit healers. Contributions to the fields of energy healing and therapeutic modalities have put Phelan in touch with groups like New York hospice nurses seeking certification to work with extremely ill and elderly patients who can receive the benefits of healing and comfort when treated with skills acquired under the teachings of Michael Phelan. He has recently developed his own unique hands-on energy healing modality called Digi-Ki. His current book release is entitled Why You Should CARE: What Happens When You Do.

Michael Phelan

Michael Phelan has worked and taught in the field of hands-on energy healing for more than thirty years. In the early 1970s, building on his intense research and study of Asian religion and philosophy, yoga meditation and Tai Chi, he began practicing a martial art called Aikido. It became apparent that these particular arts could be applied to everyday life situations, including mental, spiritual, and physical healing techniques. In conjunction with Aikido's approach to controlling the powerful Ki energies, Phelan began to study a Japanese healing art utilizing this same Ki flow, or healing energies from the fingertips.

Michael Phelan and his wife Maria moved from New York to live on the Southern Oregon Coast where Phelan is dedicated to the healing arts. He continues a healing practice while teaching, writing and facilitating various workshops. With his background and holistic experiential education he is able to impart intimate understanding rather than functional information, to make empowerment a demonstrable reality, both in his workshops and his new book, Why You Should CARE: What Happens When You Do.
